

VILLA KAYLA

BALI - UMALAS

Villa Kayla's little private lane is bright, flowery and charmingly welcoming.

The house grounds open behind the entrance doors, onto a small verdant courtyard at which end another set of doors reveals a cool and breezy corridor diverging on both side to run the entire length of the house, deserving to the right the kitchen, study, living with its embracing terrace and at last the private guest bungalow. While on the left of the entrance it leads to the main bedrooms and their peaceful quarters.

Straight across, two largely carved door panes open onto the verdant grounds of the garden, embraced by the house verandas, with in its centre the deep blue water of the pool and beyond the open expanse of the lawn.

White walls, behind which hides the kitchen, itself of decent size and appropriately fitted with all one may require to venture in the making of tasty and engaging meals, are lined with tall "toko" cabinets home to a pleasant collection of books.

Quickly vanishing they open onto the living and dining area, host at one end to an oval shape dinning table welcoming six guests.

Set a little further a lounging sofa, faces the shutter doors conveniently opening onto the living veranda, set with two large antique day beds for those in favour of the outdoor.

Behind the sofa is a small doorway opening onto a small private study set up with a desk and providing peace away for the incorrigible workaholic.

To the far side of the room, another shutter doors reveal a little hideaway terrace enclosed within a lovely landscape of flourishing trees and climbing vines, announcing the more private ground of the guest bungalow.

Set a few steps away from the main house, the guest room is a small private world of its own. With a large terrace overlooking the green of the back lawn and the surrounding neighbouring fields, its room is large and subtly divided into a pleasant living attired with all the essential to enjoy a good movie, and large bedroom area with distinct feel of contemporary provençal decor.

The en-suite bathroom is just as spacious. A luminous bathing room with plenty of storage and a charming indoor/outdoor arrangement.

The pool and its well furnished deck rest in between the main house and the guest bungalows foreground, curving back to face the bedrooms on the other end of the property, offering a welcoming haven to soak in the eloquent sunshine.

Lastly the main house bedroom wing facing the entire garden is a testimony to the peaceful attraction of the simplicity and soft tones favoured in the decor of old European family country homes. The first two bedrooms at ground level, mirror to one another each with it private walk in closet and en-suite bathrom, share a quaint breakfast terrace, yet are appropriately separated by the set of stairs, leading to the upstairs master bedroom. Bright and sunny with opportune windows and a delightfully framed balcony, this inviting bedroom enjoys an agreeable view onto the garden and surrounding at large, offering much privacy from the house centre. It benefits, just as all the other bedrooms, of the adequate proximity of an intimate en-suite bathroom and plenty full storage capacity of well sized closets.

Elegant and comfortable, Villa Kayla is a favourite to those in search of an intimate and attractive home in which to experience the tropics with style and simplicity, away yet close to the bubbly activity of the beach and town centre.
